About Jim Dixon

Jim has been described by many as an 'accountability coach', a thinking partner with a strategic, systems perspective and a relaxed, down-to-earth collaborative, business approach. Solidly grounded in integrity, respect, fairness and honesty, he strives for clarity in the midst of chaos and complexity and focuses on results within a framework of accountability. He is a Certified Executive Coach (Royal Roads University) and an Adler Certified Professional Coach (Adler International Learning / University of Toronto).

Jim has 25 years business experience in the standards, energy and consulting fields. During his 12 years in senior management, Jim led many teams involved in such functions as strategic and business planning, marketing, communications, new product and business development, product management (health care, medical devices, food safety, forestry, quality management, environmental management, aerospace, automotive), finance and accounting, acquisitions and strategic alliances.

Jim also led a wide range of programs, national steering committees, technical committees and international committees (Environmental Management, ISO 14000 and Quality Management, ISO 9001) representing a diverse cross-section of industry sectors, non-government organizations and government.

Through his international standards work, Jim has traveled and worked in more than 25 countries around the world.
